THE BRAIN POWER OF MAN.

DR. BROWN-SEQUARD'S THEORIES - HE CLAIMS THAT WE HAVE TWO BRAINS-ONE ON THE RIGHT SIDE AND THE OTHER ON THE LEFT-THE LATTER NURTURED TO THE NEGLECT OF THE FORMER-BOTH OULD BE EDUCATED TO PERFECT MENTAL AND PHYSICAL DEVELOPMENT. A very large and intelligent audience of ladies and gentlemen assembled last night in the Congregational church, corner of Tenth and G streets, to hear the distinguished physician, Dr. Brown-Sequand, of Boston, discuss the question, "Have we two brains or only oner and if two, why not

The lecturer was appropriately introduced by Professor Henry, who stated that the lecture was one of a series generously provided for by Dr. Dr. Sequard commenced by saying that his views, he hoped, being somewhat novel, would command attention. The facts he would dwell upon were new, probably would not be generally accepted, and perhaps would not be easily understood by those and would not be easily understood by the product of t stood by those not familiar with me Have we two brains? and, if so, why not educate both? The views of science upon this sub-ject were different from his. The left side of the body was the side affording volition to the brain, and, vice persu, the right side of the brain afforded volition to the body. Eminent authorities had declared that either side of the brain was compotent for this purpose. But we use only one side, and, therefore, leave out of account one half of brain matter. We owe due education to both sides of the brain, or, rather, to the two brains.

As to intelligence, the eminent authorities he had cited established the fact that either side of the brain was compotent for full development of the faculties. There were many persons of two minds, because they were never able to make up their minds. Some men claimed to be rational while they were insane. There were many cases that show clearly that there were two brains. He had known a boy in London that man festly had two brains, whose peculiarities he described. He would fall into a comatose state, and anddenly open his eyes brightly, inquiring of his other why he was not introduced to the gentle man who was present while he was asleep. Again, the lecturer saw him when the boy recogn He had two mental lives. He knew noth when fully awake; and when in the latter conditien he know what had occurred when in the former. The lecturer had seen three cases of this

As regards thoulty of speech, the fact that we had two braics was not so easily proved. The loss of the faculty of expression depends upon desease of the left side of the brain; and this proves that the right side is distinct.
As regards sight, a theory has been put forth by a celebrated physician of London that the right side of the base of the brain is the centre of sight. The inner half of the right eye and the outer half of the left eye have the base of the brain as the centre. A disease in the left side of the brain, where the optic nerve touches, would therefore affect only one-half of the brain. Notable cases were given in which ties had seen but one-half of certain object hat they gared upon. If the disease exists only in the left side of the base of the brain, only one half of the eye will be affected. So there are many cases that go to sustain the philosophers. But we do not accept conclusions unless theory is

There were three series of facts, but one would be enough, to show that the theory should be rejected. Disease of the brain, where the optic nerve touches, would not be sufficient to cause loss of sight. One side of the brain would be sufficient to sustain sight. An alteration in any portion of the nervous system, acting upon other parts, can produce disease in that part. Injury to the spinal ord would produce loss of sight on either side There was nothing more common than the loss of sight temporarily in children who suffered from worms in the stomach. Any injury in one half of the brain can exist without producing loss of sight. Either half of the brain may, therefore, erve to sustain sight.

As to the voluntary movements, these depende upon the action of the body. Yet there were many could be destroyed without affecting these voluntary movements. There ware several such cases. We must, therefore, look on one-half of the brain as being sufficient to sustain voluntary movements on both sides of the body. An irritation in any part of the brain may affect any part of the body, and an irritation in any part of the body can produce paralysis in another part. The irritation could also not upon remote parts. This thows

The same reasoning applies to sentation. There were thousands of cases affecting the brain that did not affect the feeling. Passing there facts in review we find vast differences owing to the fact that one half of the brain was developed for certain things and the other half for other things. To the left side of the brain belonged the faculty of averaging covering the reach Asticulation erail meetings and the other half for other things. of expressing curseives by speech. Articulation eral meeting is held daily at 5 o'clock at the Caldepended in great measure upon the left side of the brain. Difficulties in the mechanical point of speech were more irequently found when the left side of the brain was diseased. It was the mental whole, the temperance people are much encourpart that was jost, and not the more mechanical action. The left side of the brain was also the motive power of gusture. When the left sile was diseased patients tost the power of gestion when As regards writing, it was lost more frequently in diseases of the left side of the brain. The right arm was paralyzed by diseases of this side. Many thus diseased could not write from mem ory, although they could use their fingers and copy In those cases it sometimes occurs that persons could not write at all. Intelligence depends more upon the healthful-ness of the left side than of the right side of the brain. The right side of the brain in some case: has the power of the left, if properly developed. This serves to hysterical developments and to mutrition of the body. One, the left, applies to mental; the other, to the natural life.

The right side of the brain operates upon the limbs in cases of paralysis and other diseases also upon disturbances in the lungs, liver and other parts. Hysterisal and emotional symptoms are more common to cases of disease of the right side of the brain; out of 120 cases of paralysis that came under the lecturer's observation there were 95 caused by disease of the right side. An alteration of the retina of the eye will some more frequently from diseases of this side of the brain Out of 60 cases of the cryst side. Death occurs much more frequently by disease of the right side at the brain, and in case where patients do not die it will parties on many extensive and enduring paralysis. All this shows, not that the two sides of the All this shows, not that the two sinces brain differed originally, but that there were different developments of each. The left side of the brain was much larger than the right side. If a person went frequently to the same hatter, he would find that his list had from time to time to be enlarged. There was no question that the dievelop our two brains. The important point, the second of the time of his shorefore, would be to make children use both death. Mr. Barron was a good citizen and active mides of the body—alternately using the right and ferman, and had many friends in and out of the defit arm and the right and left leg equally.

There would be no difficulty in thus training children will be a detail of men train the day, and there will be a detail of men train the fron to full development.

Even adults who had lost speech by disease of the left side of the brain could regain the power the left side of the brain could regain the power by cultivating the right side. In gesture, persons who had lost the use of the right arm could be trained to use the left. If children were thus trained, we would have a sturdier and healthier race, both mentally and physically.

At the closs of the lecture, Prof. Heary read a telegram which he had just rec eived, announcing the discovery of a new comet at Berlin.

After singing one of the odes of the order, Mr. W. P. Drow was introduced, and said that the Sons of Temporance was the oldest and most useful organization in the country. It had stood with ranks unbroken for thirty years, and sided in the country. The current of run in redeeming more men from the curse of rum than any other temperance order in the world. Indeed all other orders are but the branches or outgrowth of the Sons of Temperance; and much of the enthusiasm awakened in the cause, and the general interest felt in the women's crusade, are but the legitimate logical outgrowth of the temperance sentliment encouraged by these orders for the past thirty years. There is a purpose in this thing. The cry for legal reform is not to be answered by more formal arguments of politi-cians, editors, or physicians. The only practical answer which will be accepted by the public is the annihilation of the liquor traffic. They were brought face to face with this traffic now as never before, and the influences all converge in one solid purpose to stem this tide.

Judge above was next introduced, and, after deploring the silm attendance, congratulated those present on the rapid strides now being made in the cause and the entrance of the principles.

in the cause, and the entrance of the principle into high places, which has given great respects bility to being a temperance man. Sober reflec-tion dictates some standard of morality, some small innectes which were not affected in cases of paralysis. There were cases on record in which it was shown that the lower lobe of the brain not a fit associate for honorable people. He had no patience with the system of common morality which teaches that a man has a right to descente the sacred Sabbath day; and if this is the me rality they intend to teach the sconer they seek their native shores, on which to teach it, the better for Americans and their institutions. The first was that asphyxia was connected with the left side of the brain in persons that were right-handed, and with the right side in those that were left-handed. The second point was that children who were first learning to talk, if disease came in the left side of the brain, learned to talk just as well with the right side of the brain. Though losing half of the brain they got along just as well.

This proved that the right side could be educated, with the left hand for execution. The third point was, that four out of every hundred self-handed persons learned to write with the left hand of process learned to write with the left hand; therefore the left side of brain, oven with

This proved that the right side could be substituted was burned out. He then came to this city and shirld point was, that four out of every hundred defi-handed persons learned to write with the left hand for execution. The shands therefore the left side of brain, even with persons left-handed, could be educated better than the right side. The fourth point was that the leg was rarely so ranch affected by paralysis as the arm. He, however, would pass over this argument, as it could only be understood by medical men.

If the lecturer had established that we had two brains then they should be developed. If we could develop he legs and the arms of both sides we could develop be legs and the arms of both sides we could develop be legs and the arms of both sides we could develop be legs and the arms of both sides we do to the right side, we would fully lievelop our two brains. To these three medicines Dr. J. H. Schenck, of Philadelphia, owes his univaled success in the treatment of pulmonary diseases.

The Pulmonic Syrup ripens the morbid matter in the lungs; nature throws it off by an easy expectoration, for when the phiegm or matter is ripe a slight cough will throw it off, the patient has rest and the lungs begin to heal.

To enable the Pulmonic Syrup to do this, Schenck's Mandrake Pilis and Schenck's Sca Weed Tonic must be freely used to cleanse the stomach and liver. Schenck's Mandrake Pilis act on the liver, removing all obstructions, relax the gail bladder, the bile starts freely, and the liver is soon relieved.

Schenck's Sca Weed Tonic is a gentle stimulnit and alterative; the sikali, of which it is composed, mizes with the food and prevents souring. It assists the digestice by toning up the stomach to a healthy condition, so that the food and the Pulmonic Syrup will make good blood; then the lungs heal, and the patient will surely get well if care is taken to preven fresh cold.

All who wish to consult Dr. Schenck, either personally or by letter, can do so at his principal office, corner of Sixvn and Aben strangs, Philadelphia, every Monday.

Schenck's nedicines are sold by all druggists throughout the country.
